To the Editor

The International Institute of Humanitarian Law is an independent, non-governmental institute incorporated under Italian law which seeks to promote international law and co-operation in the prevention of disasters, whether man-made or natural, and in the protection of the victims of such disasters. It regularly holds conferences working groups and lecture courses at its headquarters, the Villa Nobel in San Remo.

In the coming summer months, it is holding a series of meetings on human rights, humanitarian law and refugee law. These will concern such matters as improved regional co-operation, the detention of refugees and fundamental principles in the protection of victims of all disaster situations.

The Institute publishes a yearbook as well as the reports of its various meetings and studies by different experts.
